

Rowan and Bracken

Rowan and bracken, bracken and thorn
The light moon is waning, the dark moon is born
Kali, Hecate, and ancient Dianae
Storm moon and crone moon, dance in your sway.

Gone is the morning, dark is the night
The rite in stone circles is danced in moon's light
Willow be bowed and ash tree be blown
Black crow will sing now the song of the crone.

Blue bluebell, did I hear you ring?
In moorland and wood knoll your death toll you ring
Bright is the candle but dark is the heart
And deep is the darkness where the veil has its part.

Corn of Golden Broom

Corn of golden broom
Tied beneath the moon
Ashen handle, oak seed charm
Dance in magic, ward off harm

chorus

Weave the circle well
Weave the enchantment well
Sweep the circle well
Sweep the circle well

By the sickle shorn
By the maiden born
Tread the floor, and thread the air
By the spellcraft that you bear

chorus

The Great Wind Song

Traditional – Recorded by Gordon Bach on Another Land Made of Water album.

To be sung back and forth between the two voices

First Voice (Priestess)

Fair be the Easter Wind to thee
Gentle as Springtime breezes be Fair be the wind to thee
Go as you may go
Though the days pass over thee

Bright be the sacred flame to thee Passioned as lovers kisses be
Bright be the flame to thee
Go as you may go
Though the days pass over thee

Calm be the western sea to thee
Reflecting her deepest mystery
Calm be the sea to thee
Go as you may go
Though the days pass over thee

Firm be the sacred earth to thee
Growing the straight and mighty tree
Firm be the earth to thee
Go as you may go
Though the days pass over thee

Blest be the four great winds to thee
Blest as the Ladies every three Unison: Blest be the winds to thee

Second Voice (All)

Go as you may go
Though the days pass over thee
Kind now the wind to thee
Never the storm sadden thee
Kind now the wind to thee

Go as you may go
Though the days pass over thee
Kind now the wind to thee
Never the storm sadden thee
Kind now the wind to thee

Go as you may go
Though the days pass over thee
Kind now the wind to thee
Never the storm sadden thee
Kind now the wind to thee

Go as you may go
Though the days pass over thee
Kind now the wind to thee
Never the storm sadden thee
Kind now the wind to thee

Go as you may go
Though the days pass over thee
Unison: Blest be the winds to the

Everit Song

Oh, East wind be behind you, calm winds that blow
Scent of the air upon you,
in youth my heart may grow.

Chorus:

Ever it be remembered,
Ever it be remembered,
Ever it be remembered,
And guide you where you may go.

Oh, South wind be behind you,
warm winds that blow
The fires of love remind you,
in passion my heart my grow

Chorus

Oh, West wind be behind you, stormy winds that blow
The waters of life surround you,
in wonder my heart may grow.

Chorus

Oh, North wind be behind you, ancient winds that blow
The greenwoods be about you,
in wisdom my heart may grow

Chorus

Oh, four winds be behind you, strong winds that blow
A lady's blessing upon you,
In love my heart may grow
